

Kentucky History Education Conference: Call for Proposals

Do you love social studies? Do you have an innovative classroom practice or engaging social studies topic to share with educators? If so, consider joining like-minded teachers as a presenter at the Kentucky History Education Conference (KHEC). Each summer, KHEC gathers K-12 educators from across the state for a daylong conference to explore content, obtain resources, hear from leading scholars and learn about other educator's classroom strategies. Whether you are a new teacher looking to brainstorm with peers or a veteran educator with years of experience, join us at KHEC 2019!

2019 Kentucky History Education Conference

Theme: Breaking Barriers

Date: Thursday, July 18, 2019

Location: Thomas D. Clark Center for Kentucky History in Frankfort

Your session may wish to address any of the following areas of instruction for Kentucky teachers as they relate to the theme "Breaking Barriers." As you create a session, keep in mind the following suggestions, given by 2018 KHEC attendees:

- Provide ideas and materials that can immediately be implemented in the classroom
- Hands-on activities are always popular
- Look at 20th century historical topics for both U.S. and world history
- Share strategies that relate to state, national and C3 frameworks
- Focus on PBL, DBQ, or other teaching styles
- It doesn't have to just be about Kentucky history – present on another social studies topic such as geography or economics or share ideas on how social studies teachers can collaborate or integrate with other subjects such as language arts, science, the arts, etc.
- Easy tech tools for social studies

Deadline for proposals: April 15, 2019

We will notify selected presenters by April 30, 2019.
